This philosophy is interpreted through a wide range of appropriate and constructive wraparound services for youth that balances their individual qualities, needs, and aspirations with their accountability to the community. Without sacrificing public safety, DJS provides these services in the least restrictive manner possible and in a way that is both fair and impartial. Through linkages with other child-serving agencies and organizations, DJS supports a seamless system of programs and opportunities for the youth in its care.*
- Guiding Principles      *1. Public safety is best ensured by successfully addressing youth needs.
2. Youth success depends on insuring youth accountability.
3. DJS makes fair decisions based on scientifically valid instruments.

Detention Standards

Detention Standards as of December 2004

INTRODUCTION

The Draft Standards contained in this report reflect a request from Deputy Secretary Carl Sanniti to create a set of juvenile detention center operating standards. The purpose of these standards is twofold:

- To create a draft set of standards for review by the Deputy Secretary. This will enable him to begin the process of creating policy and procedure for the operation of DJS detention predispositional and pending placement facilities.
- To create a draft set of standards that will be the basis for a new audit process as outlined in Chapter 9 of the report.

This document reflects the merging of Detention Standards from the following:

- Florida Department of Juvenile Justice Quality Assurance Standards for Juvenile Detention (FLA)
- Performance based standards for Youth Correction and Detention Facilities/Council of Juvenile Correctional Administrators
- American Correctional Association's Standards for Juvenile Detention (ACA)
- Maryland Standards for Juvenile Detention Facilities (MDJJ)
- Code of Maryland Regulations (COMAR)
- Virginia Board of Juvenile Justice Standards (VBJJ)
- Virginia Standards for the Regulation of Residential Facilities (VID)

SECTION 1. DETENTION STANDARDS

Definitions

The following words and terms, when used in this chapter, shall have the following meanings, unless the context clearly indicates otherwise.

“Adaptive behavior” means the effectiveness or degree with which individuals with diagnosed mental disabilities meet the standards of personal independence and social responsibility expected of their age and cultural group.

“Allegation” means an accusation that a facility is operating without a license or receiving public funds for services it is not certified to provide.

“Applicable State regulation” means any regulation which the promulgating State agency determines applies to the facility. The term includes, but is not necessarily limited to modules, standards, and other regulations promulgated by the Departments of Education; Health; Housing and Community Development; Juvenile Justice; Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services; or other State agency.

“Applicant” means the person, corporation, partnership, association or public agency which has applied for a license or certificate.

“Application” means a document completed by the facility to furnish the regulatory authority details about the facility’s operations and includes certifications that the facility understands and intends to comply with regulatory requirements. An application includes inspection reports necessary to verify compliance with applicable requirements of other State agencies. An application is complete when all required information is provided and the application is signed and dated by the individual legally responsible for operation of the facility.

“Aversive stimuli” means physical forces (e.g., sound, electricity, heat, cold, light, water, or noise) or substance (e.g., hot pepper, pepper sauce, or pepper spray) measurable in duration and intensity which when applied to a client are noxious or painful to the client, but in no case shall the term “aversive stimuli” include striking or hitting the client with any part of the body or with an implement or pinching, pulling, or shaking the client.

“Behavior management” means those principles and methods employed by a licensee to help a child achieve positive behavior and to address and correct a child’s inappropriate behavior in a constructive and safe manner, in accordance with written policies and procedures governing program expectations, treatment goals, child and staff safety and security, and the child’s service plan.

“Body cavity search” means any examination of a resident’s rectal or vaginal cavities except the performance of medical procedures by medical personnel.

“Boot Camp” means a facility specifically approved to operate with highly structured components including, but not limited to, military style drill and ceremony, physical labor, education and rigid discipline, and no less than 6 months of intensive aftercare.

“Case record” or “Record” means up to date written or automated information relating to one resident. This information includes social and medical data, agreements, all correspondence relating to care of the resident, service plan with periodic revisions, aftercare plans and discharge summary, and any other data related to the resident.

“Chemical restraint” means use of any pharmacological substance for the sole purpose of controlling a resident’s behavior in the absence of a diagnosed medical or psychiatric condition. Chemical restraint does not include the appropriate use of medications ordered by a licensed physician for treating medical or psychiatric conditions.

“Child” means any person legally defined as a child under State law. The term includes residents and other children coming in contact with the resident or facility (e.g., visitors). When the term is used, the requirement applies to every child at the facility regardless of whether the child has been admitted to the facility for care (e.g., staff/child ratios apply to all children present even though some may not be residents).

“Child placing agency” means any person licensed to place children in foster homes or adoptive homes or a local board of public welfare or social services authorized to place children in foster homes or adoptive homes.

“Child with special needs” means a child in need of particular services because the child has mental retardation, a developmental disability, mental illness, emotional disturbance, a substance abuse problem, is in need of special educational services, or requires security services.

“Child with a visual impairment” means one whose vision, after best correction, limits the child’s ability to profit from a normal or unmodified educational or daily living setting.

“Client” means a person receiving treatment or other services from a program, facility, institution or other entity regulated under these standards whether that person is referred to as a patient, resident, student, consumer, recipient, family member, relative, or other term. When the term is used, the requirement applies to every client of the facility. Some facilities operate programs in addition to the children’s residential facility; the requirement applies only to the clients of the children’s residential facility and not to clients participating in other programs.

“Complaint” means an accusation against a licensed or certified facility regarding an alleged violation of standards or law.

“Compliance Plan” means violations documented by the regulatory authority and the facility’s corrective action to the documented violations within a specified time frame.

“Confined in detention with a suspended commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice” means that a court has committed the juvenile to the Department of Juvenile Justice but has suspended the commitment and ordered the juvenile confined in a local detention home for a period not to exceed 6 months as found in §16.1–284.1.B in the Code of Maryland.

“Confinement” means staff directed temporary removal of a resident from contact with people through placing the resident alone in his bedroom or other normally furnished rooms. Confinement does not include timeout or seclusion.

“Contraband” means any item prohibited by law or by the rules and regulations of the agency, or any item which conflicts with the program or safety and security of the facility or individual residents.

Notes

Includes community detention, electronic monitoring, shelter care, day/evening reporting centers. Note 1: All lengths of stay are adjusted slightly from the estimates derived by Chapin Hall, assuming current populations are stable. Note 2: Admissions are assumed to increase 4.5% annually during the first five years after 2005 due to expanded investments in electronic supervision and other types of detention alternatives. An annual increase of 4.5% over five years is a continuation of the rate of expansion from 2000 to 2004, when total capacity of detention alternatives grew 30%.

Notes

Includes all per diem group home and foster care placements. Excludes therapeutic homes. Note 1: Populations are expected to decrease as non-residential wrap-around programs begin to serve this population. Note 2: Trends reflect an expected decrease between years 2007 and 2010 in response to increasing wraparound.

Notes

Includes non-secure placements and staff secure facilities (e.g., Glen Mills, Bowling Brook) and youth camps, such as O'Farrell and Impact (excluding Meadow Mtn). No significant changes are projected other than those changes projected for the age 10-19 population between 2005 and 2020. Note 1: Admission rates are adjusted to fit with the known ADP numbers and the calculations of length of stay by Chapin Hall, assuming current populations are stable. Note 2: Placement numbers are assumed to remain flat in this category because any expected reductions due to an expansion of wraparound services will likely be matched by changes in the number of youth moved into these categories out of pending placement.

Notes

Includes youth in detention or detention alternatives while awaiting committed placement. No significant changes are projected other than those changes projected for the age 10-19 population between 2005 and 2020. Note 1: Admissions per time period were adjusted to reflect stable populations and fit with Chapin Hall's calculations for length of stay. Note 2: Lengths of stay for pending placement are affected by new or re-negotiated contracts for new state run programs (for committed youth) as they become available. Forecast assumes length of stay in pending placement will be gradually reduced between 2005 and 2008.

Notes

Includes Waxter and Hickey (only Intermediate and Enhanced). No significant changes are projected other than those changes projected for the age 10-19 population between 2005 and 2020. Note 1: Admissions per time period were adjusted to fit length of stay calculations by Chapin Hall, assuming current populations are stable. Note 2: Length of stay for females was adjusted from the 259 estimated by Chapin Hall to 568. Note 3: This category could decrease in proportion with an expansion of secure residential treatment.

Notes

Includes youth held pre-disposition at Hickey, Cheltenham, BCJJC, Waxter, Noyes, Carter Center, Lower E. Shore, Western Maryland. Note 1: Forecast scenario assumes no increases in secure detention capacity statewide. Changes are designed to track projections in the ages 10-19 population between 2005 and 2020. Departures from this assumption could occur due to several factors, including unexpected increases in female detention and continued increases in Area I intakes due to rising rates of drug offenses. Note 2: The starting population for Area V was originally 72, but the forecasting committee reduced it to 40 in order to fit known figures for admissions per year and length of stay. Other admission rates were adjusted to fit with length of stay calculations from Chapin Hall assuming current populations are stable.

Notes

Includes WDS House, Meadow Mountain, and other per diem treatment facilities in and out of Maryland). Note 1: Some admission rates were adjusted to fit with length of stay estimates calculated by Chapin Hall and to assume current populations are stable.. Note 2: Demand for residential substance abuse treatment is expected to increase statewide, with the greatest increases for youth from Area I. This assumption should be revisited if increased drug court utilization seems to offset some of the expected increase in residential drug treatment.

Notes

Includes youth in TFC (therapeutic foster care), TGH (therapeutic group homes), and RTC (residential treatment centers, including all per diem placements in and out of Maryland). No significant changes are projected other than those changes projected for the age 10-19 population between 2005 and 2020. Note 1: Shifts between categories in this population could occur in the future, but this scenario assumes no significant changes. Note 2: RTC Male population falls 5% annually from 2007 to 2011 as a result of expected expansions of wraparound programming for this population.

ADDRESSING DISPROPORTIONATE MINORITY CONTACT IN MARYLAND

This Special Report presents considerations for addressing the disproportionate minority contact (DMC) issue in Maryland. No statewide system assessment would be complete without addressing the central issue of disproportionate minority contact. During the transition to a regionalized service delivery system, work can proceed on developing the means to optimize the use of data systems, policies, procedures, management of programs and services, utilizing objective decision making instruments, and training to analyze and address DMC, while ensuring public safety and youth accountability.

Below we recognize the work that has been done in Maryland on DMC; review the changes in requirements mandated by Congress and resultant new procedures announced by OJJDP in 2003 to more accurately measure DMC – the Relative Rate Index (RRI); present an analysis of Maryland’s statewide and principal county data using the RRI; and make several recommendations on ways DJS can further act upon its commitment to address DMC.

ANALYZING DISPROPORTIONATE MINORITY CONTACT IN MARYLAND

In 1995, DJS conducted a study called The Disproportionate Representation of African-American Youth at Various Decision Points in the State of Maryland: Summary Report. This study was initiated to examine the nature and extent that disproportionality of African American males existed in the Maryland juvenile justice system, and at which decision points. This study examined the DMC issue within Maryland for fiscal years 1990 through 1992. Due to a lack of data, the study did not control for any qualitative factors, rather it looked only at offense severity and prior offense. The study revealed African American males were disproportionately referred to the Department at intake and also disproportionately represented in more severe dispositions than their white counterparts.

In compliance with Federal requirements of the JJDP Act of 2002, a DMC Plan is prepared and submitted by the Maryland Governor’s Office of Crime Control and Prevention.

In addition, DJS has been working with the Disproportionate Minority Contact Subcommittee of the State Advisory Board for Juvenile Services to analyze DMC issues.

OJJDP REQUIRED PROCEDURES TO MORE ACCURATELY MEASURE DMC – THE RELATIVE RATE INDEX (RRI)

Based upon an analysis of data from the states, OJJDP reported that the disproportionate number of minority youths in the juvenile justice system continues to be a concern.

Studies conducted on disproportionality have revealed that minorities entering the juvenile justice system do so at a higher rate than non-minorities. OJJDP refers to this as disproportionate minority contact (DMC). As a result, in 1992, OJJDP mandated that States, in order to receive Title II Part B Formula Grants, address this issue and raised DMC to the status of a core requirement under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act (JJDP). During the 2002 reauthorization of the Act, Congress revisited the issue of minority overrepresentation and found that due to the fact that overrepresentation of minority youths in the juvenile justice system had significantly expanded States would now be required to examine over-representation at any point of "contact" with the system.

OJJDP developed the Relative Rate Index (RRI) in 2003 to more accurately measure disproportionate minority contact by States and territories. The RRI is designed as a first step in examining Disproportionate Minority Contact (DMC). This new standard was announced by the OJJDP to the State Representatives and the Juvenile Justice Specialists in July, 2003. (OJJDP Regional Training Meeting in Portland, Oregon. U.S Department of Justice, Office of Justice Programs, Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, July, 2003). The RRI is used to point to areas for more intensive examination, and to serve as an ongoing set of "vital signs" or an "early warning system" for the management of the juvenile justice system.

The RRI method is a comparison of activity volume involving youth from different racial and ethnic backgrounds within a common time period. It is also a calculation of relative volume by using rates, and it compares rates to identify areas of disproportionate contact.

AN ANALYSIS OF MARYLAND'S STATEWIDE AND PRINCIPAL COUNTY DATA USING THE RRI

As DJS continues to collect detention data and study its populations, it is critical that it begin to take a closer look at the disproportionate number of African American youths entering detention as well as at each decision point in the juvenile justice system.

The following is an analysis of the RRI matrices for Maryland Counties and Statewide Totals.<sup>1</sup>

Anne Arundel County

The major group of concern for DMC issues is African-American youth. In the at-risk population, ages 10-17 is the only specific group to meet the 1% threshold for analysis, with African-American youth accounting for just over 16% of the total youth population in that age range.

- African-American youth:

<sup>1</sup> This analysis was prepared for DSG, Inc. by DMC expert Dr. William Feyerherm, Portland State University. DMC Plan data for the 2004 Update was provided by the Maryland Governor's Office of Crime Control and Prevention.

- The rate of arrest for African-American youth represents nearly 2.5 times the level of activity compared to White youth. This represents the single largest contributor to DMC, since the court referral rate actually combines the arrest and referral processes. (The referral rate based to arrest for white youth is 25 referrals per 100 arrests, for Black youth it is 36 referrals per 100 arrests, giving a RRI value of 1.44). In order of magnitude of the RRI values, the next area for attention would be placement in secure confinement, with an RRI value of 1.49. Given that the earlier decision points have an impact on a much larger number of youth, and given that changes in the earlier decision points may influence the later decisions, it would appear reasonable to focus efforts in this county on the arrest and referral / diversion issues.
- In terms of assessment questions related to the arrest decision and recommendations for the next level of inquiry, relevant issues would include areas such as an exploration of whether the arrest offense mix is similar for White and Black youth, whether specific prevention efforts could be targeted effectively at Black youth, whether the deployment patterns of law enforcement resources may contribute to the higher arrest rates, whether there are reasons to expect that African-American youth from neighboring areas are being attracted to some sections of the county, and whether the arrest rate is a function of greater numbers of youth being arrested or of a higher rate of arrests for those African-American youth who are being arrested.
- In terms of assessment questions for the court referral / diversion issue, it would be advisable to conduct an inventory of alternative options to court referral – focused on such issues as the geographic location and proximity to minority populations, the utilization rates for diversion alternatives, the entry criteria and whether those might include decision criteria that would inadvertently disadvantage Black youth, and the relative success rates for White, African-American and other clients.
- Other/Mixed:
Although these youth account for nearly 5% of the total at-risk youth population in the county, they have an arrest rate that is quite low, and they tend to be under-represented until the stage of detention. This under-representation may be a function of identification and record keeping issues, rather than really reflecting a much lower rate of offenses and arrests. While that issue might be interesting to explore and could be part of a larger issue of sensitizing officials to the nuances of racial and cultural identity, it does not appear that it should be a primary emphasis in terms of addressing DMC in the county.

Baltimore County

African-American youth constitute approximately 27% of the at-risk youth population for the county. “Other / mixed” youth constitute an additional 5-6% of the at-risk youth.

- African-American Youth:

- The level of arrest activity related to Black youth is 103 arrests per 1,000 youth, which is nearly 2.5 times higher than the rate of 42 arrests per 1,000 youth in the White population. Once arrested, the rate of court referrals is 48 court referrals per 100 arrests for White youth ( $100 \times 1194 / 2488$ ), and is 58 referrals per 100 arrests for Black youth, resulting in a RRI value of 1.21. Thus, the primary contributor to DMC in the county is the activity that leads to the arrest decision. Beyond the arrest decision, the referral / diversion decision generates some additional disproportionate contact, and the detention decision generates some, although compared to other counties nationally, the RRI value for detention is relatively low.
- In terms of assessment activity for the arrest decision point, the recommendations mirror those for Anne Arundel county – the next steps should involve examination of items which might contribute to the higher rate of arrest activity among African-American youth, including the relative offense mix for white and African-American youth, the availability and efficacy of prevention programs, the relative deployment of law enforcement resources, and potential alternatives to arrest.

- Other/Mixed youth:

- As indicated in the RRI matrix, there are no instances in which other youth are subject to DMC issues in the county – the only numeric value which exceeds 1.00 is for diversion programs, indicating that this group of youth accesses diversion programs at a higher rate than white youth.

Montgomery County

African-American youth constitute 15% of the at-risk youth and ‘other/ mixed’ youth constitute 23% of the county population between the ages of 10-17.

- African-American youth:

- These youth are substantially over-represented in the arrest activity in this county, with an arrest RRI value of 4.48, indicating that the arrest activity is 4 ½ times higher for this group than for white youth. In part, however, this is due to the fact that compared with other Maryland counties, Montgomery has a relatively low arrest rate for white youth. Other elements of DMC present in the county for African-American youth include the court referral process (and its reciprocal, the diversion process), as well as the detention process. In terms of court referral, based on the set of youth arrested, white youth have a court referral rate of 28.6 court referrals per 100 arrests, compared to the rate of 40.6 for African-American youth. This produces a RRI value of 1.42 when the court referral process is examined in the context of the arrest rates. Beyond that, for white youth referred to court there is a detention activity rate of 15.91 per 100, while for African-American youth that rate is 24.07, producing a RRI value of 1.51; in other words the rate of detention activity is one and one half times higher than for white youth.

- In terms of assessment and other next steps, the examination of arrest activity should proceed along the lines suggested above for Anne Arundel and Baltimore counties, with an additional emphasis on understanding what law enforcement officers use as alternatives to arrest for white youth. This may mean examination of the arrest practices in varying parts of the county, whether those are formalized subdivisions or geographic areas that may reflect residential separation of youth. Beyond the consideration of arrest and court referral / diversion processes, it appears appropriate to consider the advisability of examining the detention process in Montgomery County. This could follow the JDAI model developed by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, which considers such areas as the availability of alternatives to detention, the criteria by which the detention decision is made, and the ongoing monitoring of the detention process to maintain a philosophy of detaining those youth who truly need to be detained.

- Other/Mixed youth:

- Arrest rates for this group are relatively similar to those for the White youth population (RRI = 1.05). When taken in the context of these arrests, the rate of referral to court is somewhat higher for this group than for white youth. Whereas white youth who are arrested generate 28.6 court referrals per 100 arrests, the 'other / mixed' group generated 36.1 court referrals per 100 arrests. This difference generates a RRI value of 1.27. Corresponding to this use of court referral is a relatively lower use of diversion, yielding a RRI value of .71. Also notable is the higher use of detention, although in this instance the rate is based on detention activity involving 29 youth across the entire year, leading to some concerns about whether the rate is actually different from 1.00 – indeed the test of statistical significance does not support differentiating the value of 1.17 from 1.00
- Next steps for this group should focus on the availability and use of diversion programs – an inventory of such programs, their location, their utilization, their intake criteria and relative efficacy would be in order.

Prince George's County

African American youth constitute 69% of the at-risk youth population in this county. An additional 11% of youth fit into the 'other / mixed' category, leaving 20% of the youth as white.

- African American youth:
  - In terms of stages in the juvenile justice system, the greatest the degree of DMC is introduced at the arrest stage in Prince George's County. The level of arrest activity is roughly double for African-American youth as compared to white youth. In part, however, this is attributable to a relatively low rate of arrest activity involving white youth. In terms of the court referral process, taken in the context of arrest activity white youth generate 22.5 court referrals per 100 arrests, while African-American youth generate 33.6 court cases (RRI value 1.49). Correspondingly, the rates of diversion are lower for African-American youth, with an RRI value of .85. Again, the detention value appears worth noting, but is not statistically significant, indicating in this case that the estimates of detention use for white youth are based on such a small number of events that the difference in detention rates cannot be reliably distinguished from equity.
  - In terms of assessment issues and next steps, the RRI values indicate that attention needs to be placed on the early stages of the system arrest and diversion / court referral. Suggestion for this examination would not differ from those provided above for other counties.

Baltimore City

As with Prince George's County, the large majority of youth in the age range 10-17 are identified as minority youth (80% of the total youth, 77% of youth are African-American, 3% are in the 'other/mixed' group)

- For African-American youth, the rate of arrest constituted 110 per 1,000 youth for minority youth, compared to a rate of 40 per 1,000 for white youth. This yields a measure of over-representation of 2.75 – indicating that the rate of arrest is approaching 3 times higher for minority youth. Unlike other counties in which this appeared in part attributable to a low arrest rate for white youth, the arrest rate for white youth in Baltimore is roughly comparable to other rates in the State, indicating that indeed the arrest rate for minority youth is relatively high. Taking into account the arrest rates, minority youth and white youth generate relatively the same levels of court referrals (68.7 per 100 arrests for white youth and 70.4 court referrals for Black youth).
- In addition to differences in arrest rates, there are also significant differences between the detention rates for white and African-American youth – with a RRI value of 1.66 the rate of detentions is approaching two times higher for minority youth. Proceeding through the justice system, there are also significant differences in the rate of delinquent findings, a relatively unusual finding in terms of the national picture related to DMC. Since we do not have information on the number of youth for whom charges are actually filed, the differences in rate of delinquent findings may be a function of charging decisions. It may also be a function of a relatively small number of white youth who actually went to court and a relatively low rate of delinquency findings for this group of white youth. It should be noted however that for both white and minority youth the rate of delinquent findings is markedly lower in Baltimore City than the corresponding rates for the State as a whole.

- In terms of next steps, the focus in Baltimore City could focus on the arrest process, but also on the detention processes (as noted in Prince George's County) and to explore the apparent differences between the rates of delinquent findings in the city as compared to the remainder of the State.

Statewide Analysis

Approximately 32% of youth in the age range 10-17 are African –American and another 9% are in the 'other/mixed' category.

African-American:

- Statewide, African-American youth generate nearly twice the level of arrest activity as white youth. (RRI = 1.93) Moreover, once arrested, they are more likely to generate court referrals, with a court referral rate of 52 per 100 arrests compared to a court referral rate of 32 per 100 arrests for white youth. Once in the juvenile court system, the rate of detention activity is likewise higher, with a rate of 33 detention actions per 100 court referrals, compared with 22 per 100 for white youth
- These Statewide figures, however, are an aggregate of the actions at the local level, and are best seen in the context of those local actions. The following tables present three aspects of those local actions: the arrest, the court referral after arrest and the detention decision.

County	Arrest Rates (per 1000 population)			RRI (compared to white youth)
	White	Black	Other	Black	Other
Anne Arundel	50.3	127.7	19.3	2.54	.38
Baltimore County	42.4	102.8	12.1	2.42	.28
Baltimore City	40.1	110.0	41.2	2.75	1.03
Montgomery	14.9	66.8	15.7	4.48	1.05
Prince George's	16.9	36.2	---	2.14	----
Statewide	42.5	81.9	18.1	1.93	.43

In terms of the arrest numbers, several items come to attention. First, arrest is consistently an issue for African-American youth, but not for other minority youth. This suggests, among other things, that state level attention to prevention issues for African-American youth may be warranted. However, it is also clear that the rate of arrest varies markedly across the State – the rate of arrest for African-American youth in Montgomery and Prince George’s Counties comes close to the arrest rate for white youth in some of the other counties. Second, the State RRI value is smaller than any of the county values, since most of the minority youth in the State reside in these two counties in which the overall arrest rates are lower. The range of arrest rates suggests that there may be differences in community options available for police in lieu of arrest, and that those differences should be examined to determine if options are used or available in some jurisdictions that might be usefully disseminated to other localities.

County	Detention Rates (per 100 court cases)			RRI (compared to white youth)
	White	Black	Other	Black	Other
Anne Arundel	18.4	23.7	38.1	1.3	2.1
Baltimore County	18.8	20.7	15.4	1.1	.82
Baltimore City	20.8	34.6	29.4	1.66	1.42
Montgomery	15.9	24.1	18.6	1.5	1.2
Prince George’s	43.9	53.2	---	1.2	---
Statewide	21.9	33.3	28.2	1.5	1.3

With respect to detention rates, it may be noted that detention variations are not a large DMC issue in Baltimore County (although they are in Baltimore city),. Moreover, with the exception of Baltimore County, over-representation in detention appears to be an issue in each of the other counties. It is however secondary in magnitude compared to the over-representation evident in the arrest information.

County	Court Referral Rates (per 100 arrests)			RRI (compared to white youth)
	White	Black	Other	Black	Other
Anne Arundel	25.1	36.3	31.8	1.45	1.27
Baltimore County	48.0	57.9	42.6	1.21	.89
Baltimore City	68.7	70.4	60.0	1.03	.87
Montgomery	28.6	40.6	36.1	1.42	1.27
Prince George’s	22.5	33.6	----	1.49	----
Statewide	31.8	51.9	38.3	1.63	1.20

RECOMMENDATIONS ON WAYS TO ADDRESS DMC

Below we make several recommendations on ways DJS can further act upon its commitment to address DMC:

Recommendations: The variation in rates of referral to court suggests that there are considerable variations across the State with respect to the availability of diversion alternatives. While some of that variability may be attributable to resource differences, it is likely that some jurisdictions have found ways to construct diversion programs that might be appropriately shared with other jurisdictions, without significant resource infusions. It is recommended that, given this variety, DJS should undertake a statewide inventory of diversion programs and their use, followed by a working conference in which that information was shared across policy makers from the various counties, with the objective being to encourage the development of additional diversion resources in each community.

It is recommended that the Department, through the Disproportionate Minority Contact Sub-Committee of the State Advisory Board for Juvenile Services, place special emphasis on this issue. It is imperative that the Department examines the current manner in which race is collected and update ASSIST to include the approved U.S. Census Bureau race categories. DJS must also assess DMC at each decision point to determine the rate at which disproportionality is occurring so that the appropriate policies and programs can be put into place.
